Charge laid in elderly man's death

• Autopsy still to be performed to determine cause of killing: Police • Reports say victim was kind, giving person \(\bigcup\) Homicide is 10th in HRM so far this year

A 24-year-old facing a second-degree murder charge in the death of an elderly man in Lower Sackville will make his first court appearance today.

Nicholas Edward White, who turns 25 on Dec. 20, was charged with murder on Saturday, one day after police were called to an apartment building at 70 Cobequid Rd. and found a dead man inside a residence.

The victim's name hasn't been released and police aren't saying how they believe he was killed.

"Our suspect that is charged went into this building and things happened from there," said Halifax RCMP spokesman Cpl. Scott MacRae.

Police were called to the three-storey apartment building at 12:30 a.m. regarding several disturbance complaints.

Police arrested a man a few minutes later at a nearby cemetery with the help of the K-9 unit.

The man was then questioned by investigators and remanded to the Central Nova

Fire guts old rehab centre

◆ Asbestos part of the reason it is set to cost HRM more than $2M to demolish building ◆ Council yet to decide what will be done with land

Demolition was only weeks away but it is believed arsonists got to it first.

The old Halifax County Rehab Centre on Bissett Road in Cole Harbour — famous as the backdrop for the Trailer Park Boys — was destroyed by a fire on the weekend.

Fire crews responded just before 4 p.m. on Saturday afternoon and the complex was ablaze.

"The rear of the building is totally demolished, totally gone," platoon Chief Chuck Bezanson said yesterday.

"I guess you'd you call it the recreation hall — it's joined to the rest of the structure with a breezeway and it's a total loss."

A fire investigator will arrive today to see if it's safe to enter to complete an investigation.

Three male teenagers were seen walking away from the site and were arrested by RCMP officers on Saturday. An RCMP spokesman said there were no reports of charges as of yesterday afternoon.

Assessment

Cole Harbour Coun.
Lorelei Nicoll said the fire shouldn't add anything to the cost of the $2 millionplus demolition, but HMs staff are heading out there today to assess the site.

The rehab centre was closed in 2002 and since then the owner, the Halifax Regional Municipality, hired security for the site. It was the set for the Trailer Park Boys television series and a few movies, said Mayor Peter Kelly.

The cost of demolishing the complex — at more than $2 million — was added to this year's budget.

"It's clear it couldn't remain where it is so it had to be demolished and we incorporated the funds in this year's budget and it will be removed," Kelly said.

"From my understanding (the demolition) was supposed to be started by the end of the year."

HRM gives $2.5M for Africville reparations

The Halifax Regional Municipality says it has transferred $2.5 million to the newly formed Africville Heritage Trust Society.

The money, part of a $3-million reparations deal announced earlier this year, will go to the resurrection of the Seaview United Baptist Church. In a release late Friday, Mayor Peter Kelly said the remaining $500,000 is "earmarked for the installation of services to the new building and a proposed interpretive cen-tre." The funding was initially announced in February, when Kelly offered a long-awaited apology on behalf of the city for the razing of Africville, the historic black community demolished to make way for the construction of the MacKay Bridge. • metro

More dollars needed to curb graffiti: Report

○ Complaints far outstrip charges for graffiti in HRM with 540 complaints and 28 people charged in 1 year

More funding now to curb graffiti in the Halifax Regional Municipality could save costs down the road, according to a report from the Graffiti Task Force.

Halifax regional council will receive the task force's report on its efforts to "eradicate" graffiti over the past year tomorrow.

According to the report, prepared by Jane Nauss of the Halifax Regional Police, HRM has spent approximately $283,153 in graffiti cleanup in 2010. The report estimates the "collateral costs" associated with graffiti to be more than $1 million. The report suggests in order to meet the goals set out in the 2006 Graffiti Management Plan, more funding is required.

"In 2006 when the Graffiti Management Plan was first adopted, $50,000 had been allocated within the CAO's budget," it reads. "There has been no dedicated corporate funding since."

The report goes on to say that there are no full time employees working on graffiti prevention or education, and "a thorough analysis of HRM resources is required."

Community bus routes are back on the table

Halifax regional councillors are once again faced with a report on the tricky transit issue of community bus routes.

Council will receive a report tomorrow outlining different service models — and their costs — for community transit in Beaver Bank, Porter's Lake, and a pilot project in Sambro.

At issue is the service standards approved by councillors as part of Metro Transit's five-year operating plan.

That plan identified routes where service "does not meet approved service standards, or service is deemed to be redundant."

Staff were asked to review some of the affected transit initiatives after several councillors brought forward concerns in the fall. Spryfield-Herring Cove Coun. Steve Adams, for instance, alleged rate payers from Harrietsfield to Ketch Harbour are paying $72,000 for transit services they're not receiving.

Adams said transit service in the area had been cut by 60 per cent without similar reduction in area

While included in the report, the fate of the No. 3 Manors Route will not be decided tomorrow. Coun. Jerry Blumenthal, who has been fighting the cut of the Manors route, said supporters have won a temporary reprieve to try out an adjusted service plan.

"This particular item has gone well beyond the area rate that was charged to Sambro," he said at a Sept. 14 council meeting.

The report outlines several options for the each of the effected areas, including varying hours, number of trips, and operating and capital costs for each.

EU gives billions to bail out Ireland

Country has until 2015 to reduce deficits Ireland joins Greece in depending on foreign aid

European Union nations agreed to give $89.4 billion in bailout loans to Ireland yesterday to help it weather the cost of its massive banking crisis.

Nearly all the major candidates in Haiti's presidential election have backed a statement calling for the cancellation of yesterday's election.

The statement read to a cheering crowd also calls for people to take to the streets to protest allegations of fraud.

Candidate Anne Marie Josette Bijou read the statement on behalf of 12 of the 19 candidates.

They accuse current President Rene Preval of favouring candidate Jude Celestin of his Unity party.

Election trouble

Those on the ground in Haiti predicted a chaotic election day.

- More than 4.7 million voters are registered on electoral lists. Monitors with the United Nations acknowledge that hundreds of thousands are people who died in the earthouake.
- Preliminary results were not expected until Dec. 7.

There are widespread reports of people unable to vote. Many have been told their names are not on voter lists.

It is not yet clear whether the problems are due to fraud or merely a result of disorganization following the January earthquake.

With most poll stations opening late, observers from dozens of parties crowded voting areas and furious voters were turned away from stations where poll workers could not find their names on lists. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IMMIGRATION

Flunk rate for citizen tests jumps

Failure rates for immigrants writing citizenship tests have soared since the spring, when tougher questions and revamped rules made it harder for newcomers to become Canadian.

The new test, introduced March 15, was based on a bulkedup citizenship guide released a year ago to give immigrants a richer picture of Canada's history, culture, law and politics. The 63-page guide,

Discover Canada, replaced a slimmer volume dating from 1995 that had fewer facts to memorize. The failure rate for the old citizenship test, with questions drawn from the smaller guide, ranged between four and eight per cent. Failure rates for the new test, however, rocketed to about 30 per cent when it was first introduced prompting officials to revise the rules to avoid clogging the system with those making appeals. Big banks set to show good health in Q4

Earnings to increase by up to nine per cent for year Less growth for TD and RBC expected

The big news on the Toronto stock market in the days ahead will be a slew of fourth-quarter earnings reports from Canada's biggest banks, which are expected to paint a healthier picture of Canada's financial institutions.

Royal Bank of Canada, Bank of Montreal, TD Canada Trust, CIBC and Scotia-bank and National Bank of Canada are scheduled to report their fourth quarter earnings over the next two weeks.

The banks' capital markets divisions - which were a big drag on bank earnings in the prior quarter - are expected to show an improvement in the three months ended Oct. 31.

But the banks' strong domestic foothold in consumer banking provides the foundation for robust earnings growth, said Jonathan Popper, assistant vice-president and senior portfolio manager at MFC Global Investment Management.

"Canada's been in the sweet spot, our real-estate market has been strong, in-terest rates are low," he said. "The mortgage numbers are going to look good for all the banks and the loan loss provisions, with consumer confidence going up, not only will that not be a disappointment, but it could be a positive sur-prise," Popper said. However, TD Bank and Royal Bank of Canada could see less significant growth than their peers, dragged by operations in the United States where the consumer credit and mortgage markets are still in the doldrums.

Investors will be looking for signs that some of the big six banks will start raising dividends again after taking a pause during the recession. THE CANADIAN PRESS

PUT POWER IN HANDS OF COMMUNITIES

The Canadian Taxpayers' Federation is right. There, I've said it. And it only hurt hile I can — and do and will – dispute the larger goals of this never-met-a-public-expenditureit-can-stomach crowd, the CTF did discover real slime under its latest freedom-of-information rock.

Though there are only a million aboriginals in Canada, 82 reserve politicians "earned" more than the prime minister's $315,462 salary last year, 222 pocketed more than their provin-cial premier counterparts and 704 raked in the tax-free equivalent of $100,000-plus.

One Nova Scotia councillor — on a reserve with 304 members took home $978,468 tax free.

Some First Nations leaders argue these CTF remuneration numbers are ripped from their context – that the packages lump together salaries, honoraria, travel expenses and con-tracts for native businesses, and that native political lead-ers don't get plush pensions like their non-native colleagues.

Some complain darkly that singling out native leaders smacks of racism. Mi'kmaq elder Daniel Paul blames the Department of Indian Affairs, which he says has been "well aware of what's going on and have chosen not to do a thing about it.'

There is plenty of blame to go around.

Traditional government paternal-ism coupled with a "What makes this scandal more recent laissez-faire fear of more difficult appearing to questo digest is the tion First Nations' stark reality of autonomy created fertile ground for non-leader nefarious native aboriginal life leaders who in Canada." choose to take advantage.

What makes this scandal more difficult to digest is the stark reality of non-leader aboriginal life in Canada.

Consider the Third World conditions that exist on many Canadian reserves. Consider that aboriginal young people are seven times more likely to commit suicide than the national average. Consider that the unemployment rate for aboriginals in Nova Scotia last year was 17.4 per cent compared with nine per cent for non-aboriginals, and that employed aboriginals earned just 77 per cent of hourly waged nonaboriginals.

Now consider again those CTF numbers.

It is past time for transparency and accountability. It's time to put power in the hands of native communities, not native leaders.

Symbol of transformation

CANADA'S ENVIRONMENT MINISTER

Worth mentioning

Sometimes a dress is just a dress. But not in Kate Middleton's case. Her wedding dress will be the symbol of her transformation from commoner to princess, from Kate to Catherine, and define her image to billions of people as they watch her exchange yows with Prince William next spring.

This dress must be elegant, memorable and per-fectly fitted. There are delicate balances to be struck: Modern but tradi-tional; alluring but not too sexy; classy but not overly opulent — more grown up than Princess Diana's famous meringue confection, with its puffy sleeves and 25-foot train.

Whatever the ultimate choice, expectations are sky high. Middleton has natural good looks and a radiant smile — people seem to wish her well, even if she will be able to afford a dream dress that is far beyond most people's reach.
"I'm not sure if she could pull off a Diana dress, but it would be great if she had something that magnificent," said Mary Alders, 32, a secretary who is looking forward to the royal wedding. "What-ever it is, everyone will want it. I can see it as silk, maybe some beading. It definitely will be spectacular." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Celebrities to support World AIDS Day by signing off Twitter, Facebook

Alicia Keys and Lady Gaga take charity work seriously, and they're going offline to prove it.

Gaga, Justin Timber-lake, Usher and other celebrities have joined a new campaign called Digital Life Sacrifice on behalf of Keys' charity, Keep a Child Alive. The entertainers plan to sign off of social media platforms like Facebook and Twitter on Wednesday, which is World AIDS Day. The participants will sign back on when the charity raises $1 million.

Raising children in the limelight's glare

▶ For celebs, bringing up kids can be daunting ▶ Their kids' clothes and hairstyles face constant tabloid scrutiny ▶ But Hollywood moms like Katherine Heigl say the 'overwhelming love' for a child is the only thing that matters

Being a parent is tough enough, but doing so in the limelight can complicate things, with the paparazzi, the pre-school politics and the increased risk of screwing up your kids.

"It's one of those things I think that you just have to dive in blindly," says Katherine Heigl, who recently adopted a baby girl from China with husband Josh Kelley.

"It's that overwhelming love that makes us want to procreate. No one would do it otherwise as it is just so intense."

Perhaps the single most famous Hollywood mom, Angelina Jolie, has been learning firsthand how hard the celebrity spotlight can be on children: Her daughter, Shiloh, has become a subject of tabloid attention herself at just four years old thanks to her unconventional hairstyle and boyish clothing choices. "She likes to dress like a boy. She wants to be a boy." Jolie told Vanity Fair. "So we had to cut her hair. She likes to wear boys' everything. She thinks she's one of the brothers."

But should what a toddler wears be fodder for magazine covers just because she's the daughter of famous actors? Since Hollywood can be a pretty strange place to begin with, a lot of celebrity parents do their best to make things as normal as possible for their kids.

"I still take my kid to school every day and put him to bed every night," says super-busy producer and director JJ Abrams. "I don't work on weekends."

Showbiz: The next generation

Long before Macaulay Culkin smacked the aftershave on his cheeks in Home Alone, kids have been stealing the show in Hollywood. And while childhood stardom can often lead to less-thansavoury adult lives, some have managed to be successful on both sides of their 18th birthday — Elijah Wood and Jodie Foster come to mind, among others.

Metro takes a look at some promising youngsters who look like they can avoid the True Hollywood Story treatment. • NED EHRBAR

Chloe Moretz

After slicing apart bad guys in Kick-Ass and sinking her teeth into unsuspecting adults as a vampire in Let Me In, 13year-old Chloe Moretz might be a little intimidating to some people. But the refreshingly down-toearth actress insists there's nothing to be scared of. "I'm just a normal 13-yearold girl," she says. And while some might worry about Moretz taking on such gruesome material. she's very good at discerning reality from fantasy. "It was all acting. It was making up a character that I'm not." she says of her work in the bloody Let Me In.

Jaden and Willow Smith

When your parents are megastars Will Smith and Jada Pinkett Smith, it likely doesn't take much to get used to the spotlight. After stealing scenes from his dad in The Pursuit of Happyness, 12-year-old Jaden became a movie star in his own right this summer with The Karate Kid remake, co-starring Jackie Chan.

But before he could enjoy the attention, nineyear-old sister Willow came along to steal it with her surprise hit single Whip My Hair. Imagine what they'll do when they hit puberty.

Callan McAuliffe

At 15 years old, Australian Callan McAuliffe is already breaking hearts after starring in Rob Reiner's Flipped this summer as one half of a 1960s teen romance.

And his profile is about to skyrocket with his next role in the hotly anticipated I Am Number Four, based on the teen sci-fi

But just because lots of people have been seeing his work, that doesn't mean McAuliffe has as well. "I hate watching myself, as do a lot of actors," he says.

Kodi Smit-McPhee

Like his Let Me In co-star Moretz, 14-year-old Kodi Smit-McPhee has been dealing with some hefty adult themes. He first won acclaim as the Boy in last year's adaptation of Cormac McCarthy's bleak The Road before romancing a vampire this year.

Luckily, he's had concerned adults around to help shield him from some of the mature subject matter. "We always remained protective of Kodi as a crew," says The Road director John Hillcoat. "There was a lot of black humour; you can imagine the jokes about cannibalism."

Eggs for dinner, with style

Drie and sourdough bread give 'egg on toast' a new sophistication

There are those nights when breakfast is the only way dinner is going to get on the table.

But that doesn't doom you to a bowl of cold cereal in front of the television. There are plenty of easy ways to add a dinner-like sophistication — or at least satisfaction — to your breakfast staples. And that was the inspiration for this rich and cheesy take on eggs and toast.

I started with a thick slab of sourdough pantoasted in butter. If you insist, you could cut the fat by using olive oil cooking spray in the pan instead. Then I added an egg to the pan and a slab of brie to the bread. When the egg was cooked, but the yolk was still a bit runny, I placed it on top of the brie

And I called it dinner. And it was scrumptious in an almost disturbingly

Ingredients:

- Start to finish: 10 minutes
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) butter
- 1 thick slice sourdough bread
- 1 egg
- Salt and ground black pepper, to taste
- 1 thick slab brie (about 60 g/2 oz)
- 1 sprig fresh thyme

good way.

It got me thinking that this same dish could be recast as a finger food for holiday parties, too. For that, I would roll out a bag of pizza dough as thinly as possible, brush it with some olive oil or melted butter, then pop it in the oven. When it was nearly cooked, pull it out, top it with brie and crack a few eggs on it, then return it to the oven until the eggs are ready.

Toasty Brie and Egg

Preparation:

In a large skillet over medium-high, melt butter.

Place bread in skillet and toast until bottom is crispy and just turning golden, 3 to 4 minutes. Flip bread to toast other side, pushing it to one side of the pan. Crack egg into other side of pan. Season it with salt and pepper.

About 1 minute before egg is cooked to desired doneness, place brie on bread. Use a spatula to transfer egg, sunny side up, onto brie. Cover skillet and cook for another minute. Garnish with thyme and serve immediately. Makes 1 serving.

TOSS TOXIC COSMETICS

Question: I had a look at the list of 12 ingredients the David Suzuki Foundation suggests I avoid in my cosmetics.

Now that I've found toxic ingredients like fragrance and parabens in almost everything, I'm not sure how to dispose of the products I no longer want. I don't want to pour them down the drain, so should I take them to the dump?

Lisa of Toronto

dentifying the "Dirty Dozen" ingredients to avoid in your cosmetics and personal-care products is a huge first step in going green.

Now that you've done your homework — reading the fine-print ingredient lists with their numerous complex chemical names — it's natural to want to turf everything overnight.

And you're not alone. Almost 80 per cent of products reported in our spring survey contained at least one of the "Dirty Dozen" ingredients. They are that widespread.

When it comes to disposal, you were right to question how to dispose of them.

One option is to consider finishing up what you have and then buying a safer alternative without harmful ingredients next time.

If you'd rather stop using your products today, find out if your city considers personal-care products to be household hazardous waste. The City of Toronto's website, at toronto.ca/garbage, has some helpful information about disposing of unwanted household hazardous waste.

No matter where you live, check out your city's website for more tips on disposal.

A final option is to take a stand and mail your product back to the manufacturer.

Include a note explaining your reason, and then ask them to sign the Compact for Safe Cosmetics.

Researchers comb through oceans to find thousands of new animals
 Discoveries range from 'furry' crabs to 'bone-eating' marine worms

Ten years ago, 95 per cent of Earth's oceans remained unexplored. Now, experts are unveiling an unprecedented inventory of ocean life.

First, meet the Yeti Crab. It has hairy claws and reproduces its own bacteria, and is one of over 5,300 new species discovered by the Census of Marine Life.

Some 2,000 researchers from 80 countries set out to document every species in our oceans.

"We knew that there were unknown species in the oceans, but we didn't know if it was one, 10 or 100 million species," says Dr. David Billett from Britain's National Oceanography Center. "Off the British coasts, only an estimated 10 per cent of species are unknown. But off the coasts of countries like Angola, the figure is 90 per cent."

Experts found almost 200 new crabs, shrimps and prawns. "Rainforests have a reputation for biodiversity, but most of the species are insects," explains Prof. Paul Tyler, a marine scientist from Southampton University.

"By contrast, there's an extremely wide range of animals in the ocean."

Billett discovered new sea cucumbers, a common marine animal in the Indian ocean. "The deep waters aren't dull places where nothing happens." The most charming dis-

Russell Peters' degree

The comedian gets an honourary degree for his observations on race, class and culture • He admits school wasn't important for him

School was never a strong point for Toronto's claim to comedic fame - the irreverent Russell Peters.

Yet, the multimilliondollar grossing comic, whose brazen critiques of ethnicity and class captivate international audiences, finally got a degree.

Well OK, it's an hon-ourary one. He didn't have to take any tests to get it, but still.

The School of Creative and Performing Arts at the Humber Institute of Technology and Advanced Learning recently presented him with an honourary degree for his keen observations on race, class and culture, and for his support of young talent.

Peters This year, Peters launched a $20,000 scholarship for a student from his former high school, North Peel Secondary, which focuses on technical skills and trades.

Metro Toronto caught up with Peters by email and asked him for his thoughts on the award, the importance of education, and his advice for aspiring performing artists.

What did you think when you heard the Humber School of Creative and Performing Arts was giving you an honourary degree?

I thought, "Wow, that's pretty cool!" But at the same time it's kind of ironic considering I didn't go to college and just squeaked through high-

When you were in school, what did you think you'd be when you grew up?

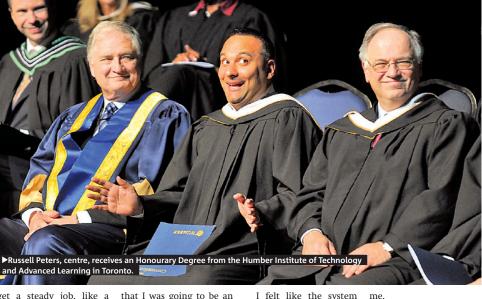

When I was 14, I wanted to be a breakdancer. That was it, just a breakdancer.

What was the most important lesson you learned in school?

That the cool people in school aren't the cool people when you're finished school. The cool crowd becomes the "tool" crowd.

Had your parents chosen a career path for you?

No, they didn't lay anything out for me. We were very working class, so my parents just wanted me to get a steady job, like a union job or something where there was security.

What did they think of you not going to college? About becoming a comic instead?

They were fine with me not going to college there was no pressure. They didn't really understand what becoming a comic meant.

I might as well have said that I was going to be an astronaut. They were like. That's nice, son...

You didn't need higher education to be successful and have a rewarding career, yet you recently developed a scholarship for a high-achieving student planning to go to college.

Why do you think education is so important?

For me it wasn't imporwasn't really made for kids like me – I had ADD and needed extra help, but the teachers were more fo-cused on the kids who were "getting it," instead of the kids who weren't.

That all changed when I switched schools and went to North Peel Secondary.

That was the first time I felt like I fit in and that the teachers took the time to pay attention to kids like

What is your advice to aspiring performing arts graduates?

Don't do it because vou just want to "make it big."

If you're going to do it for the money, forget about it.

Being a comic or an artist of any kind, you have to do it because you have to.

It's a calling.

Duval then hit from 33 yards out to give Montreal the 28-27 win.

Montreal earned its third Grey Cup win in eight appearances since 2000.

Despite several trips to the final and two straight titles, Alouettes coach Marc Trestman wasn't about to call his team a dynasty.

Montreal receiver Jamel Richardson, who caught eight passes for 109 yards, was named the game MVP while Saskatchewan defensive lineman Keith Shologan was the top Canadian.

Richardson, who put up over 100 yards for the third straight Grey Cup, was the first receiver to win the MVP award since Edmonton's Jason Tucker in 2003.

"It's not about me, it's about those guys in the locker-room," Richardson said

"I didn't do it for me, I did it for them. That's all that mattered going into the game, doing it for the next person. That was our thing going into this game.

With Commonwealth Stadium again a sea of Roughriders green, the Riders stayed in the game due to a Duval miss. With Montreal up 21-18, Duval couldn't connect from 41 yards out.

Saskatchewan returned the ball to its own 16-yard line with roughly 90 seconds remaining, giving the sellout gathering of 63,317, a Edmonton Grey Cup record, a wild finish.

Saskatchewan pulled to within 21-18 on Darian Durant's one-yard TD pass to Marc Parenteau at 11:52 of the fourth. It was set up by a 31-yard reception by Andy Fantuz to put the Riders on the Alouettes' one-yard line.

Montreal countered by driving to the Saskatchewan 33-yard line, only to have Duval miss and give the Riders another chance. But there would be

Calvillo says he has lesion in throat

Grey Cup winning quarterback Anthony Calvillo says he will undergo surgery in the next few weeks to have a lesion in his throat removed.

Calvillo says doctors found the lesion after he was hurt in a game against Winnipeg earlier this year.

He says they told him biopsy results on whether it was cancerous were inconclusive, but they told him he could finish out the year.

He says the surgery will see half of his thyroid gland removed.

If the tests come back as being benign, Calvillo says he could be ready to play football next year.

Mooseheads lost at sea after tough start

Opening goal turns into deep hole Turbide breaks shutout bid

The Halifax Mooseheads felt the full force of the nation's third-ranked team yesterday.

The Mooseheads were hammered 7-1 by the powerhouse Saint John Sea Dogs at Harbour Station in New Brunswick and are now mired in a three-game losing streak.

Zach Phillips scored 34 seconds in and the Sea Dogs never looked back, scoring twice in the first period, twice in the second and three times in the third en route to the win.

"They scored right away and that's about the worst thing that can happen against a good team like that," said Mooseheads head coach Bobby Smith. "We fought back, but it was a difficult game against

- Garrett Clarke made an immediate impact with the Shawinigan Cataractes in his debut on Saturday.
- He recorded a goal, two assists, three shots and four hits and was the third star in a 6-4 loss to Gatineau.
- He was held off the scoresheet in yesterday's 5-2 loss to Moncton.

those guys, and, you know ... tough loss." Rookie forward Francis

Rookie forward Francis Turbide scored the lone Mooseheads goal early in the third and goalie Mathieu Corbeil stopped 29 of 36 shots.

The Mooseheads, 9-18-1, also lost 4-2 to the Cape Breton Screaming Eagles in Sydney on Friday, falling to 0-3 against their provincial rivals. Forwards Gabriel Desjardins and Luca Ciampini, with suspected concussions, and Gerrad Grant, with an ankle injury, didn't play yesterday. The Mooseheads' fivegame road trip continues on Wednesday against the Shawinigan Cataractes.

Laval talk dynasty after Vanier dominance

In the swirling snow and in front of their home fans in Quebec City, the Laval Rouge et Or juggernaut could not be stopped.

Workhorse tailback Sebastien Levesque set the tone early with a 41-yard touchdown run and the No. 1 ranked Rouge et Or rolled over the Calgary Dinos 29-2 on Saturday to claim their sixth Vanier Cup in the last 12 years.

"It's a dynasty," said

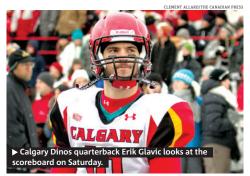

Laval quarterback Bruno Prud'homme.

"We're a big team with a big coaching staff in a big city and that's it. It's tough to come in here and

The Dinos got their only points on a safety in the first half.

It was the second straight Vanier Cup loss for Calgary, which also fell 33-31 to Queen's last year.

It was also a frustrating final game for Dinos quarterback Erik Glavic as the two-time Hec Crighton trophy winner and former Saint Mary's Huskies pivot completed just six of 27 passes for 61 yards and one interception.

"We have a good team, they just beat us," said a dejected Glavic. "The weather factor played a bit of a role, but they're a good defence. It's tough. This is hard."

- "He's playing without an (anterior cruciate ligament) in one knee and a double reconstruction on the other. You've gotta give the guy credit."

Rainmen trim roster after scrimmage

The Halifax Rainmen sent three players packing yesterday as the Moncton portion of their training camp came to a close.

The Rainmen cut Quin Humphrey, Larry Diamond and Peter Mulligan, leaving 15 players vying for the final 10 roster spots.

A few more players are expected to be added to-

The Rainmen, who opened camp last Tuesday, held an intra-squad game on Saturday night at Moncton Coliseum, with Team Blue beating Team Black 122-94.

Stefan Welsh, a six-footthree guard who spent four seasons with the NCAA Division I Arkansas Razorbacks, dropped 28 points in his bid to make the Rainmen.

Fellow tryouts Tajuan Porter and Troy Jackson scored 18 points apiece for Team Black, while fourthyear Rainmen forward Eric Crookshank chipped in with 17

Welsh, Porter, Jackson and former Georgia Bulldogs guard Mike Mercer are among those who will earn strong consideration for contracts. Owner Andre Levingston said he expects all four to get a chance in Premier Basketball League exhibition games against the Saint John Mill Rats on Dec. 10 and 16.

Returnee Desmond Ferguson (hamstring) and newcomer Taliek Brown (flu) did not play in the intra-squad game.

AUS BASKETBALL. The Saint Mary's Huskies women's basketball team fell twice to the Memorial Sea-Hawks on the weekend to drop to 3-4 this season.

Kicker is clutch

• Bryant good on field goal despite attempts to ice him

Matt Bryant kicked it right between the uprights, then he did it all over again.

The second one counted, giving the NFC-leading Atlanta Falcons a 20-17 win over the Green Bay Packers in a game yesterday be-tween playoff contenders that lived up to the hype.

Bryant's second-chance 47-yard field goal — the Packers called timeout just before he made the first attempt - with nine seconds remaining capped a bruising defensive struggle filled with huge fourthdown plays, pushing At-lanta (9-2) to its fifth straight win. It's Atlanta's longest winning streak since 1998 and assures a third straight winning season for a franchise that had never even had two in a row before this run.

Of course, the Falcons have much higher aspirations sitting atop the conference standings with five weeks to go.

Aaron Rodgers guided Green Bay (7-4) on a 90yard drive to tie the game with 56 seconds remaining. He converted a pair of fourth-down passes, in-cluding a 10-yard touchdown pass to Jordy Nelson that made it 17-17.

But Eric Weems broke loose on the kickoff return and was dragged down by Matt Wilhelm with a facemask tackle. The Falcons took over at the Green Bay 49, Matt Ryan completed four straight short passes and Bryant made the winning kick.

Michael Turner, who rushed for 110 yards, put the Falcons ahead 17-10 in the opening minute of the fourth quarter.

Jay Triano couldn't see a silver lining after the Raptors' home loss against Atlanta. Josh Smith scored a ple-double with 12 triple-double points, 13 rebounds and 10 assists yesterday as the Hawks handed Toronto its second straight defeat, 96-

"They beat us every single position, every single guy," the Raptors head guy, coach said. "We've got to get better.'

The Hawks won every matchup from starters to the bench and they dominated the Raptors in the second half before a crowd of 17,032 at the Air Canada Centre.

Andrea Bargnani scored 14 and DeMar DeRozan added 13 for the Raptors (6-11), who shot 40 per cent from the field in posting a season-low in points. They managed six more points, Nov. 6 at Portland.

The Raptors were only six points down at the half but were held to 11 points in the third quarter.

'Nobody could score and we couldn't stop those guys and that is why you have a 20-point game," Triano said. Toronto played its first

Federer gave his rival little chance to mount a challenge in the 22nd meeting between two of the greatest players of all time, winning his fifth season-ending title 6-3, 3-6, 6-1 at the ATP World Tour Finals yesterday. Federer won an incredible 92 per cent of the points played on his first serve in the final, and lost only 13 points on serve the entire match.

I was able to stay offensive. Rallies were never that long," said Federer. "That kind of maybe frustrated him." The top-ranked Nadal, who won the French Open, Wimbledon and the U.S. Open this year, broke Federer once in the second set, but appeared to tire as the match wore on.
